The Calvert Buckler, Jr. House, built circa 1900, is a much-altered example of rural vernacular housing forms constructed throughout Calvert County. The original main block of the house is an example of an I-house, a popular domestic building form extraordinarily prevalent throughout the rural United States in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

This two-story building presents an I-house form, with a three-bay-wide façade, central entry, and single-pile plan. It has been substantially altered by the addition of a two-story front-gable portico on the façade and a one-story rear addition that connects the once-freestanding kitchen to the main block. Set on a solid masonry foundation, the building is clad with aluminum siding and has a side-gable roof sheathed in asphalt shingles. The two-story ell has a steeply pitched gable roof. The dominating two-story portico has a front-gabled roof supported by thin Doric columns of wood. The portico's tympanum is clad in vinyl siding. The main block of the building has one interior-end chimney and an exterior-end chimney that is non-historic. Interior-end chimneys rise from the southern ends of the ell and the kitchen. The symmetrical façade has a central entry and two 6/6 vinyl-sash windows on the first story. The single-leaf entry has a one-light paneled wood door with two-light sidelights and a two-light transom. The second story of the façade is unequally pierced by three 6/6 vinyl-sash windows with narrow surrounds and louvered shutters. Single and paired 6/6 vinyl-sash windows illuminate the side and rear elevations of the house. A one-story canted bay window with three 6/6 vinyl-sash windows has been added to the south elevation of the main block. The kitchen is two bays square with a side gabled roof and slightly overhanging eaves. The primary elevation, facing west, has a single-leaf entry with a nine-light and paneled wood door and a single 6/6 vinyl-sash windows.

SETTING

The Calvert Buckler, Jr. House faces north on Huntingtown Road, to the west of Huntingtown. It is surrounded by mature trees and shrubs. The property, noted as Lot 6, consists of 1.89 acres. The area to the rear of the dwelling is surrounded by a wooden picket fence. A paved drive leads from Huntingtown Road to the rear of the house, abutting a brick paved walk to the once-freestanding kitchen.

PRIMARY RESOURCE

This two-story building presents an I-house form, with a three-bay-wide façade, central entry, and single-pile plan. It has been substantially altered by the addition of a two-story front-gable portico on the façade and a one-story rear addition that connects the once-freestanding kitchen to the main block. Set on a solid masonry foundation, the building is clad with aluminum siding and has a side-gable roof sheathed in asphalt shingles. The two-story ell has a steeply pitched gable roof. The dominating two-story portico has a front-gabled roof supported by thin Doric columns of wood. The portico's tympanum is clad in vinyl siding. The symmetrical façade has a central entry and two 6/6 vinyl-sash windows on the first story. The single-leaf entry has a one-light paneled wood door with two-light sidelights and a two-light transom. The second story of the façade is unequally pierced by three 6/6 vinyl-sash windows with narrow surrounds and louvered shutters. Single and paired 6/6 vinyl-sash windows illuminate the side and rear elevations of the house. A one-story canted bay window with three 6/6 vinyl-sash windows has been added to the south elevation of the main block. The kitchen is two bays square with a side gabled roof and slightly overhanging eaves. The primary elevation, facing west, has a single-leaf entry with a nine-light and paneled wood door and a single 6/6 vinyl-sash windows.

SECONDARY RESOURCE

A non-historic one-story garage is associated with the house. An asphalt-paved driveway curves around the house from Huntingtown Road to the front-gabled garage.
